
Subject: Raveshaw and Sydney | Mendoza and Mobius = Any differe
Posted by Anonymous on Sun, 11 Aug 2002 10:24:00 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

As far as I know Mobius and Mendoza are the same, although for some weird reason you always see more of Mobius than you do of Mendoza - maybe it's because the Nod folks are more vehicle dependant usually. Raveshaw and PIC Sydney do the same damage, I think, but the major advantage Raveshaw has is that his beam is tiny, making it harder to see where it's coming from. With PIC Sydney, once you fire, everyone knows where you are and you're a prime target for snipers. This is especially noticeable on Field, where sieges are common and these two units are often used. It's much easier to help break a GDI siege with a Raveshaw and not get killed than it is to help break a Nod siege with a PIC Sydney, mostly because it's harder to tell where the Raveshaw is. [August 11, 2002, 10:26: Message edited by: -HDC- Hibiki]
