I wholeheartedly agree. My kills vs deaths is way off, and i'm not ranked well, but play often and play as a team. I noticed that since i started doing alot more sniper games, my ratio has dropped even lower, but i have so much more fun. Also, I tend to "take it for the team". I'm the "noob" that rushes in the door in an apc rush to take out the mines for the 3 engineers behind me. They get the credit, but we win even though they are idiots. (Anyone can place c-4, getting it to the mct is the hard part). Look at their stats for head shots as well. A player that hits others in the head 9 times out of 10 is a player worth having.
