Came home from work and decided to play some. Got involved in a pretty competitive game near the end. Started a new game and had the misfortune of having a noob by the name of liquid75 on my team. Apparently he has no clue that the mine limit is 30. He decided to lay mines in open ground, AGT protected entrances, and other areas just to rack up some points. Leaving our base a sitting duck. I scrambled to lay mines in key entrances, but they soon vanished as this jerk layed more mines in the grass or on sides of boulders on Hourglass. The team urged him to stop, he replied negatively and rudely. Then as we continued to get swarmed by Nod, after losing our AGT and Barracks, he decides to steal a mammy designated for base defense. The owner spammed away trying to get him out of his tank to no avail. Later the same tank was stolen by a stealth. Result, we lost. Today's Jerk of the Day award goes to liquid75.
