Too many people are forgetting basic military strategy: ground troops win the battle, not the air. Nobody ever occipied enemy territory with a helicopter. Air units role is to provide ground support: air superiority, air to ground attacks to kill tanks (what the real Apache was designed for) and occasionally infantry, and for support fire during assaults/extractions. Makes me laugh to see 6+ choppers heading to the base, thinking they can take it out. Unless the defending team is clueless, it's a slaughter: dead choppers and pilots falling like rain...(ex-Air Force flight sergeant)
