with the way the game places you randomly i make that mistake all too often, and sometimes it costs me. i was playing on the map that i can't remember it's name(lol.. it's the one with the tiberium field in a cave, both harvesters graze there, and there's always a big fight for control of it), and playing gdi. a friend was on the same side and we were both going out as gunners to see what harm we could do to the enemy base. i saw a stealth up against a large rock and didn't think anything of it. oh good i thought, we have stealth support in case enemy inf get too close. well he opened up on us and man, was i shocked back into reality or what!? anyway, he did some damage to both of us, though we finally got him. but it was a long trip back to the base to repair. lol...
