ya know, what you just said is true(what the hell am i still doing up!?). the one thing i am(was) good at is golf. i played on the high school golf team and my senior year, we came in second in state. when i played with "regular" golfers, they would sometimes be amazed and tell me i was a pro. i would always shrug those complements off as just hacker talk. it never dawned on me that they were truly in awe of my game and wished they could play so well. when the game ended they would be happy to break 90 or even a hundred, but i would be upset if i didn't break 80. so now(finally) I'M humbled! d@mn, anybody got a tissue? there's something in my eye....
