

---

Subject: Newbies Etc, Etc.

Posted by Anonymous on Sun, 24 Mar 2002 01:53:00 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

We must always remember there are first timers playing all the time, it does P a person off. As a hotwire I will often top up the buildings from the outside if they are down only a bit, if they are under attack I head inside. If there was a better instuction book, we wouldn't have as many problems, like newbies trying to place 50 mines, while the important mines are disappearing after # 30. I try to praise newbies when they do something right, but it is hard giving out the owners manual in the heat of battle. I am surprised at the level of team work in many games, more credits need to go to repair guys though, I have saved so many peoples butss while they keep racking up the credits, balancing is needed I feel.

---