quote:Originally posted by Dante: anyone see the Time Machine... technically Einstein could NOT have killed Hitler when he went back in time, as the reason he built it was Hitler, therefore, if Hitler never rose to power, then he would not have went back for that sole purpose... as mentioned above, a paradox, BUT he could have went back, just not been able to kill him...just my two cents...No, because his intentions to begin designing the initial Chronosphere device were for the U.S. government, as stated before... Which means since he originally made it for the U.S. government, that means he could do anything but go back in time and try to stop himself from working for them... Or do anything which would affect that outcome.
