regardless of the fixing our system needs, i still have free health care, and if i get cancer and need chemotherapy or surgery, then it's free. If I get hit by a bus on the way to work, i can go to the hospital right away, and not pay a cent.

And in regards to someone's earlier claim of 44 million uninsured americans still having "speedy access" to health care - that's a farce. They're uninsured because they can't pay. If they can't pay, how are they supposed to have speedy access to a system that will bill you $21 for a pill of tylenol?

This is my last post here btw. Cheers!
