I'm not a teenager. Normally when someone argues, like you've persistently shown, they're trying to win what they're arguing for. If not, you're either bored or you just want to prove a point... Which is still trying to win something.

Now I notice you find this funny, once you can't respond to me you start pulling out the ad hominem crap. Are you going to provide some kind of intellectual challenge or should I ignore what you write from now on?
