I agree... grow up. using someone else as a scapegoat for a decision not to do something is about as childish as you can get. I remember I did something similar way back in grade 4 (if your in grade 4 though, then I appologise for thinging otherwise). Someone from a group made fun of me, so no one in that group was allowed to participate in the function I was planning.

As far as you thinking your the best without evidence to back it up, thats just as childish. There is nothing stoping you from proclaiming it, nor having it be true. Just if your going to continue with that claim, prove it.
