
Subject: PT Hack Needs Fixing Server Side Preferred
Posted by msgtpain on Mon, 23 Aug 2004 12:58:14 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Crimson I didn't say I condoned it. I meant that I've read posts from people. Anyone who knows how to edit the files that let you cheat can make slight modifications and other changes to pass any "test" a moderator might want to give them. But... RenGuard stops all of them.

So that's it Crimson? "We don't condone cheating, and we're sorry that a member of our team likes to do it once in a while" ?

Honestly, I don't mean to continue to go on like this.. but out of all the things that have gone on in the last 2.5 years, this "acknowledgement" really left me quite pissed , but also perplexed.. Perplexed at how this company, that is supposed to be at the front of all our problems, making Renegade better (and cheat free) in to the future, would continue to sweep all this type of dirt under the rug and simply "move on".. I know we've had these conversations before.. where does it all end? When the community simply shuts up and ignores it all too?
