

---

Subject: Oh yeah.

Posted by Doitle on Thu, 09 Sep 2004 01:44:03 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Tax Cut > Money goes to people > Back to government while boosting the economy

Lets follow just one dollar, on this magical journey!

That there Bush feller in the Whitehouse makes one of those tax cuts. Releasing our friend, the dollar. Mr. Dollar is so happy that he is no longer sitting in a stuffy old coffer doing nothing. He's free to do what he does best, progress the economy, and boy he is stoked. So he goes on out to a middle class family, who with their check from "the gov", buy a new computer. Mr. Dollar heads on to Best Buy. He's there for a bit until because of his presence, Best Buy finds itself able to buy another shipment of computers thanks to Dollar and his buddies. You remember Mr. Dollar being stoked right? Cause now Compaq is stoked that they just sold a bunch more computers to Best Buy after receiving Dollar and his traveling partners. Now who has Mr. Dollar touched so far? He's helped the family, he's helped Best Buy, and he's helped Compaq. Let's see where else he goes, shall we? Compaq in the process of their ordinary business realize, "We're low on AMD processors for our 5893i line...". They hop on the phone and order up some shiny new processors from Silicon Valley. How does this transaction occur? Mr. Dollar is on the move again! He's arrived at AMD where business is booming thanks to all the processors sold to build new computers to replace those sold to the retail stores, whose stocks were depleted by families buying computers with their tax savings. AMD is doing so well, they decide to give their workers a raise. Mr. Dollar now heads to the Smith home where he waits a bit in savings. April 15th rolls around, and the Smith's have to pay their taxes. Mr. Dollar to the rescue, they pay their taxes with Mr. Dollar and guess what, He's completed his cyclical journey and has arrived back with the government. Tired from his journey, he heads to a stuffy old coffer, and gets some well deserved rest, before his next big trip into the American Economy.

We salute you, O' hard working dollar. Protectorate of Commerce and Purveyor of Society.

This has been a presentation by the Doitle Group, created for usage by Public Access Forum. ©2004 Usage without express written consent by Doitle is totally O.K. by him as long as he's totally mentioned.

---