C4minerj_ball430l can say that though. I'm religious. It gives me the ability to say things like that. Like a african-american/colored person/black can say the "n" word and not get into any trouble, but when a white cracka says it, he gets his ass capped.

You're a moron. You see, I don't like you, so it gives me the ability to insult you like that. Oh, damn! I really respected you too. :rolleyes:

You don't know the whole story, so don't even talk. This is something that happened on IRC. You have no part in it, so just quit your bullshit, sit down, and shut the fuck up.

I don't feel the need to elaborate, but since you are such a dumbfuck, I'll explain it anyways. You see, things can be offensive, whether or not they're meant to be. Like I said, it's just like blacks saying the "n" word versus whites. Blacks (african-americans/color people) have a history of that word and can be very disrespectful if it's said at them from somebody outside their little circle or race. Same is with religion. Even though someone may mean that as a light-hearted joke, the fact that they're not religious makes it seem to be offensive. Since I am religious, people know when I say that it's a light-hearted joke, but if someone else was to say it, I may be offended.

Again, this was something that was in IRC and it wasn't even exactly like this situation.

Call it a double-standard or whatever you wish, but that's the way the world works. Unfair? Too bad.
