AircraftkillerUntil you get shot down in two seconds by a loser with a n00b cannon ramjet "sniper" rifle...

Belive it or not, i've heard many times that you say its not possible to shoot down a helicopter with a sniper rifle in real life, but that is not true.

Many types of firearms can be purchased that easily in the United States. Few of them, however, would be as dangerous in the hands of terrorists. A .50-caliber sniper rifle, experts say, would be more than capable of shooting down an airliner as it took off or landed. Indeed, aimed properly, this weapon could be as effective as a shoulder-fired anti-aircraft missile, such as the one used by terrorists in an unsuccessful attack on an Israeli passenger plane in Kenya in November. A .50-caliber rifle, by contrast, sells for as little as $1,250 at Potomac Arms in Alexandria. Incendiary rounds, which ignite on impact, cost roughly $2 a piece and are also essentially unregulated.

Info about this can be found just about anywhere. So next time you think that its impossible, just think about if the driver, or gas tank were shot at from the right angle
