If you want them to stop attacking Reborn, why don't you actually go for the source of the problem? You sound like a Democrat, ignoring the real problem while putting the blame on everyone but who deserves it.

If I steal from someone, and lie to them about it - punching me would be a logical course of action for that person. Yet, you would blame the person who retaliated instead me, because I caused the entire situation.

That's faulty logic. You encourage Reborn to continue making crap, because as long as they do someone will bash it and you'll be right there to try and defend their crappy work, instead of asking for it to be made better.

Quote:1. There is an actual model of the light tank in the 2nd or 3rd Allied briefing movie (top right corner). This model does not look like the model in game.

Take a screenshot and show it, I've never seen the Light Tank in any mission video except for the second Soviet "Try to steal the Chronosphere" video. In that, it was a M-60 Patton battle tank.

Snipers are a logical addition to any army in reality, and we added them because they did appear in Red Alert and are a necessary addition for anti-infantry duties. It appeals to a wider crowd, makes soldiers less dominating against vehicles, and also keeps it true to the original game.

Volkov had several different weapons, including a silenced sniper rifle, silenced pistol, and a silenced cannon that fired high explosive rounds which decimated everything. This was all in Red Alert. What's your point?

Now, for the rest of your gibberish... The reason I say their work is bad just might be because it's bad. Why is that so hard to understand? Making work does not automatically grant it "OMG TAHTS TEH GOOD STUFFZ" remarks. Another fallacy of logic you keep practicing.

I look at myself from several different points of view. This is why I insist on the highest quality possible while trying to please the fanbase and stay true to Red Alert at the same time. I have been through the "omg ranalart suxxxxxx" bullshit enough with our first two releases and resolved to make them surpass anything for this game that will ever come out.

If Reborn can't do that, then that's their own problem.
