ToolstyleUberfahrWhere is this "Europe" country btw? Somewhere in Asia?
I really really hope you were joking there, other wise you have less of a clue of foreign countries than ACK.

@ACK

Most of the domestic policies of the countries in Europe are aimed at helping the citizens of their countries, making life better for the "people" means a happier and more productive country, a more productive country makes more money, a country with the aim of making more money is Capitalist therefore Europe is Capitalist.

That's not capitalism.

"An economic system in which the means of production and distribution are privately or corporately owned and development is proportionate to the accumulation and reinvestment of profits gained in a free market."

It doesn't involve creating a welfare state, which is what Germany is. That's a part of socialism.

None of you have yet to prove me wrong here, yet you live in the fucking country you're arguing for.
