I wonder why I'm so drawn to the night like this. I cannot help but wonder what compels me to watch it in what could be described as envy every time I look out the window, or step out the door. Perhaps I'm seeing more to it than what really exists here, or maybe I'm insane? Regardless, as a good friend once stated... "Sanity is highly overrated." Makes me wonder how right she is, and how wrong I am, sometimes.

Upon closer inspection, I'll have to clean this room out again. Garbage is piling up, comes from me being uber-busy with a game modification. Surprisingly I'm making a lot of headway with it, but I'm losing a lot of sleep and whatever social life existed before this is totally erased. It doesn't really matter to me, as I've survived alone most of my life. Sure, I owe my physical existence to those around me, but I owe my emotional, spiritual, and mental development to myself only... What I'll always do is reach for the skies above, and attempt to glide through the air...

I know how you fell man
