JavacxGod will not meddle in people's personal affairs. It would make Him a hypocrit. To a certain extent, and one I believe is well worthy of consideration, Disposableh makes a good point.

Why does one prey to God in times of physical need (when God in fact will do nothing to affect the free will of anyone) and then not curse God when something bad happens. It seems to be a double standard on our part.

Define Against Your Free Will...

Does it not imply that someting is imposed upon you, without your desire?

So, if you "ASK" God for help, insight, direction, etc... you can thank him when you feel you have made the correct choice, or feel that he has given you the proper guidance you were seeking..

Unless you asked for your life to fall apart, he didn't have anything to do with it.. that's just called "Life".

But again, when you plead with him for the guidance to help you out of a shithole.. don't forget to say thanks again.
