mewhywhy, look at what EA did to the C&C name already. Look at Generals. That's the first all-EA C&C game, and they killed the name right there.

All EA does is care about their revenues. They could care less if the game is great, just as long as it sells. They know that the C&C community is huge and very loyal, so they know a lot of people will buy it just because of the C&C name.

If they cared at all, they'd sell the C&C name to some other company. They could get A LOT of money off of the name, and save the C&C name, but that won't happen because EA is greedy as fuck.
