I know the law, i know it must be followed, but i also know that sometimes common sense and morals overplay the law in this kind of a case, i suggest you go out on the street and talk to some normal blue collar folk (i don't know if it would work in canada as well asin america, but it might) and see what they think they woudl do if someone murdered there loved one, would they "follow the law" or want them to pay the price.
