

---

Subject: As if we could pretend this wouldn't come around...

Posted by cheesesoda on Tue, 21 Dec 2004 20:50:43 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

SuperFlyingEngi

So, I should blindly follow our leaders? No, I'm afraid that's entirely wrong. There must always remain the question in a democracy. I'm not perverting Mr. Jefferson's statement in the least. It's exactly what he meant, and the point remains. This blind "patriotism", if you can call it that, emanating from the Republican party disgusts me. Why am I a bad American? Because I chance a look at what our President does? Should I believe in what he does because you do? You obviously don't understand our political system in the least. If censorship of ideas comes, democracy leaves.

You're quite the hypocrite, aren't you? You say that Republicans blindly follow Bush, yet everything you say and believe is nothing but Liberal propaganda spouted from Liberal media distributors.

I certainly don't blindly follow Bush. As I said earlier, I've disagreed with him on a lot of subjects, but I see him as a better fit as president than Kerry would have been if he were to have been elected.

I guarantee you that I have more morals than you do. Especially since I come from a religious perspective. I don't like the torture and killings of humans, but it's war. War has completely different rules. You have to do what you have to do in order to save lives and to better lives of people. I know for a fact that if God didn't approve of war, He wouldn't have let David slay Goliath, and then make him the greatest king of Israel.

You can't just look at these situations from one perspective. You have have to look at all of them and then morally choose what's right, and not choose based on your bias.

---

Yes. I wouldn't like it one bit, but in order to get to those behind the horrible act, then it'd all be worth it. I have enough common sense to know that I sure as hell don't want someone like that in my town. I wouldn't be protecting them, so what do I have to fear?

---