CrimsonWell composed.

So my point is... if (hypothetically), the war is "for oil"... then at least many of you understand why oil is so important rather than simplifying it to "omg people have to die because of this black gooey stuff!"

Oh, and guess what? You can already replace that black gooey stuff with hydrogen, but because of the little capitalist system we're all working in, nobody can afford to buy a hydrogen car just yet except the so called 'high class'.

At least I can comfort myself by saying that they'll be worth just as much as a regular car in two years from now...
