

---

Subject: Linux?

Posted by xptek on Thu, 06 Jan 2005 01:00:08 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

glyde51ScampBlazer"Most" web sites are run on "clunky apache". Unless you have some integrated .Net stuff, there is no reason to use IIS along with all its vulnerabilities.

Agreed. I made the mistake of attempting to use IIS for Digital Depiction. It's really more of a pain than anything. APACHE 4 LYFE.

I still believe Apache is clunky for an average user. Average is the keyword there.

I think I'm average user. Apache just has the right amount of configuration options needed.

---