I dont understand how people can possibly think clearskin is cheating. Who in their right mind actually plays an entire game in scope? Are you saying snipers scan for targets zoomed in? The only time I zoom in is when I see a target that is far away. It also doesn't give you a distinct advantage when aiming at someone, unless their head is bigger than the view allowed by the original scope, which in that case you would need the entire screen :rolleyes: but of course I think we know when that would be. So this "advantage" over others is bullshit.

P.S. - One could argue that clearskin is a disadvantage, because the green makes it easier to see in dark places when scoped....
