Pretty much a pointless topic but the private board has always had an enigma surrounding it. Back in the days of the ra2 board I was asking Chris Ruybor for a private forum in which people could talk about official things.

It took quite a lot of nagging before he finally enabled it. I said the war room would be a good name. So the forum finally got put up, I did the odd report in there using the old HTML. I even did a post about a new forum intergrated into WOL, but got told it would cost $8k from Ted :/

Then came the time when I wanted a few trouble makers banned (naming no names), Chris wanted evidence that they committed the 'crime'. Apparantly quotes didn't hack it. So I started moving topics from the main forum to the war room. This idea stuck ever since. When Yuri's revenge was announced I thought the grinder would be a good name, Chris agreed and it was changed.

The war room was used on the emperor boards and the renegade boards for a time. Once I was moved to the renegade boards I was a moderator of the private forum for the first time. I changed the name to the silo as I thought it was more c&c related.

Sorry if this is classed as spam but I thought it might interest some people for a little bit. Also strangely enough I still have access to the old silo on the renegade boards .
