Ok... one thing I would like to start off in saying.

"Do you really think we are going to get a game as good as the original red alert that we all know and love.?"

I don't know why I loved that game so much. The graphics are laughable and the game premise is ludicrous. Lets see.

- "Albert einstein goes back in time to kill hitler by giving him a fatal handjob, thus altering history!"

But the game rocks, handjobs and pornographic subplots aside, i still can't find anything wrong with it. All old games had naff grafics compaired to todays halo's/half lifes/super noasark 3d - but that does not stop them from being great. I still find my self playing snes and n64 games on my pc. Why you may ask... it beats the flying fuck out of me... but I think it might have something to do with a 'good story' and 'gameplay'.

Redalert was the first rts I ever played, it bought me in to the whole c&c way of life, I still remember the first time i ever played it, I still remember the name of my favourite singleplayer level (,tanya's tale). I still remember thinking 'Tanyas hot' and 'I bet in the next game they are going to turn my soon to be wife in to a blond with big hooters and the ability to be the lead in uwe bolls next game adaptation for the big screen - think 'house of the dead' and 'alone in the dark.'

We all saw what happened with generals and realert2. I don't give two shots about bad acting and psychic squid that can beam dirty thoughts in the heads of my fighting men and woman and tape major-league baseball without implied written consent.

Both were under the c&c banner, and both had fuck all to do with the games I love. They were pretty much soulless enteries that the undead sacrificial goat fucking money whores at ea love.

Where the hell is my tiberium twilight motherfucker. I want to see cain come back and kick some ass. I want to see if second coming of cain was some sort of alien conspiracy and that the tiberium is teroforming my beloved motherearth in to some sort of alien playground, (it's pretty obvious) [/RANT]

I think maybe I will go back to being mellow, I don't know why but I just woke up this morning with a funny feeling and the sudden and uncontrollable urge to start a pissing contest with every one I meet.
