BeanyheadPerhaps, but that has nothing to do with education level. It doesn't matter what your education level, you can have a job in politics; George W. Bush proves this. It's still voted by popular vote because YOU voted those officials in office who vote on the president. (At least the house representatives that vote).

Yeah, a Bachelors Degree from Yale University and an MBA(M is for Masters) from Harvard Business School just fall off the back of a truck these days. :rolleyes: :rolleyes: :rolleyes:
:rolleyes:
