JavacxmripateIt seems somewhat unreasonable to talk about how bad being high is if you've never been high yourself.

That logic is pretty tweaked. That is also like saying it is unreasonable to talk about how bad drunk driving is unless you've also done that yourself.

The fact of the matter is, a given majority of people, when high, turn into complete goofed off morons. If that's how you want to feel, go nuts, and hope you don't get caught for breaking the law. The point is, probability points to negative outcomes of doing such drugs-- that is the basis for people saying it is bad without actually trying it.

Yeah I didn't word that very well. Oh well.

I'm just saying that there is no appeal to it. Why do it?

My point had more to do with this line of thought. How can you judge its appeals accurately without experiencing them?
