

---

Subject: Looking to upgrade to XP

Posted by Ultron10 on Fri, 18 Apr 2003 14:30:57 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

bigejoe14 Get XP Pro. Home requires a stupid 30 day activation key thing. If you don't activate it within 30 days, it will... "turn it off". Pro is better because it doesn't need the activation thing, because it was made to be installed on multiple computers. And you get more features.

If you have a legal copy of XP then why would it be stupid?

I've installed it many times and even though you get the message 'Product has already been registered on another computer' I've bypassed it by pretty much rebooting and trying to register again. (can't remember exactly what I did but it wasn't hard)

As for the question, yes XP is good for gaming (I have XP Home and it works great)

---