DanAny FPS above 30 is sufficient, since human eyes cant notice the difference much from frame rates above 24fps. So since you get 100fps on average, whats the big deal? If you ran RG and someone tries to use !forcerg on you, then it just goes to show that you're good, and other people will know you're good when they see you're getting all those headshots and you're running RenGuard.

I believe that is the root point he is trying to address. As Aircraftkiller stated previously, no person should have to use third party software for any purpose out of their own free will. I choose not to use RenGuard; I should not be considered lower than others because of this choice. With this state of mind in full bloom, RenGuard Users could easily create a state of mind that labels them as being the Perfect Race. If you want some kind of confirmation that my ability to kill you is purely based on my ability to play the game and not external/internal aides, then you honestly should not be playing with the public. Paranoia and fear only lead to destruction. I know there are other options out there; the problem is nobody is willing to take a look at them, let alone not be immediately against them. It's a sad state, but it just goes to show you how far this game has truly spiraled to the bottom of the barrel.

Or perhaps it is just simply the average age group/level of maturity that make up the majority player base for this game.
