The war was a great idea played out in a ridiculously horrid fashion. The morals and conviction regarding it were completely IN check and every intelligent soldier in any army associated with it would have known it.

They're certainly not fighting FOR President Bush, they're fighting because he told them to do that for the Iraqi people that were being oppressed by Saddam. Now, you need to realize, Bush may be a dimwit, but he has his morals straight. The Iraqi people needed help and he gave it to them in the only way that he could given the circumstances.

Oh, and a 1 in 20 chance of being killed? Well, World War two was something a long the line of 1 in 14, so I'm guessing you're a bit off your rocker when you're comparing the United States Army to that a relatively poor militia of scattered cowards and fundamentalists.
