Perhaps you're not as smart as you're pretending to be, and your words were interpreted exactly as you wrote them. Next time go for the extra effort and write it exactly how you mean it instead of allowing holes in your argument that can be exploited to my advantage... Because if this is how you argue, I can see every other argument leading to "But you're putting words in my mouth" which I've never done for two reasons:

1. We're not speaking, we're typing.
 2. You didn't make your writing articulate enough to put any words anywhere they already weren't.
