j_ball430They manufacture the music to target certain consumers. This takes away from the music itself. Would you rather listen to music where the musician doesn't really give a fuck about what anybody thinks and just enjoys what he does, or would you rather listen to someone who's only performing what you like because they know that's what you like, and they want your money? To me, the choice is easy.

To me, the choice is easy also. I'll buy what I like, plain and simple. If the artist doesn't give a shit what people think and enjoys what he does, that's cool, but if his music sucks I ain't wasting my money. As long as the music is good in my opinion, the artist could be a flaming homosexual that enjoys buttsex with criminals, I could care less.
