But, whether you believe it or not, your uncle died for you, your family and your country, not Bush, and if you see it that way you might feel better about it.

Do you really believe that kind of bullshits?

Irak had no money because of US Blocus. They were only able to exchange oil for food. The didn't have massive destruction weapons. Only fucking scuds... They are miles away from US.

So let me explain something: Your uncle died to help USA gaining control of OIL reserves of Irak and also because Bush wanted to finish the dad's work...

The truth? Your were safe in USA. And if USA didn't go to Irak, you will still be as safe as before.

If american people want security then they should protect airport first. Going to the desert of africa won't change anything. Terrorists are all over the world.

If we were really just in there to get the oil then our gas prices wouldn't be at all-time highs at the moment. Don't even try to justify the Oil for Food scandal.

The fact of the matter is, we took the war to them instead of having to fight it on our land.
