Granted, acting in a movie requires a fair amount of talent on the part of the actor, a job of personal sacrifice like being a policeman or fireman is infinitely more demanding. These are the kind of people we should be looking up to, and people like Michael Crook who go out of their way to insult them make my blood boil.

Because the poor suck.

FYI--if politics have little to do with the thread's main topic, it's inappropriate to try to change the topic to a debate; that's like turning a tribute thread to Terry Schiavo into a debate on killing the disabled (something you did). It's completely out of line and inappropriate, not to mention off-topic. Quit trying to derail the thread into another one of your conservative bash-fests.
