Recently there have been terrorist attacks in London, where I work. There was a bomb detonated 100 feet away from me, and i had a day of chaos. My entire family work in London with me, and due to the chaos, mobile phone networks were jammed so no one could call eachother. Police where everywhere and there was mass panick. The streets where filled with people running in all directions but nowhere to go as London was all sectioned off. There was nearly a riot. I was slap bang in the middle of this and worried that my family might be amongst the victims of the terror attacks. My dad actually gets the same bus as the one that was bombed, and he got the bus around that time, so i was really worried about him. As it turned out he was on the bus 30 minutes earlier to this and all is now well, there are still terrorist activties happeneing in London, and only a few days ago someone got shot 5 times for being a suspect bomber, also there was another attempt of bombings on public transport.

However, inspite of all this, I believe the suggested plan is not the answer.
