This old gem again?

From what I understand the X360 is going to be a more flexible system for developers which means we can expect to see more games. And that's what it comes down to, the games.

Sony has been known for their pack of lies (PS2 will have graphical capabilities of Toy Story. PS2's power blows Dreamcast out of the water. Blah, blah blah). I just can't believe some people still think the tech demos from the Sony E3 presentation were shown in real time.

I don't want to be seen with the Bananarang controller for the sake of my sexual orientation.
