I don't get enough stuff in the mail to check my PO Box every day. I'm lucky to get one piece of mail every 2 months that isn't junk mail. I also work from home and don't often leave the house during the day, and at night the post office is in an unsavory neighborhood and there are frequently drunk bums sitting at the entrance of the post office just waiting for some well-off helpless female like me to stop by. So, that said, I haven't checked the box since the last time I told you I did and it wasn't there.

I am most certainly NOT the type who would make false promises to you and not follow through. The thing probably arrived the day after I checked it and is sitting there waiting for me. I have to go there today anyway because my 1 year subscription is up and I have to renew. I'll get back to you.
