So, BHS started up a new internal Wiki to keep track of our internal stuff and documentation and it got me thinking... why not have a public community wiki? I couldn't think of a good reason not to, so I am pleased to announce:

http://www.renegadewiki.com

This wiki allows ANYONE to make edits and it keeps a history going back to the beginning. What that means is that if some people want to act like children and delete parts pages or put all sorts of nonsense content on them, anyone who discovers the vandalism can very easily revert the changes back to the good version.

It is my hope to relocate all our help and tutorials that are sitting out on dozen different websites into one easy-to-find location. When a newbie asks about any question we've heard a hundred times, we can just point them to the wiki and with any luck, their question will be answered.

Creating an account is not necessary to create pages or make edits, but there are enhanced features available if you do. (Not the least of which is that your IP won't be shown to everyone) You will also have your name attached to your edits so anyone can see who spent the time to put together such great information.

Take a look around. I created links to a few pages to get us started. Feel free to create a new page I haven't created as well.

If you are found repeatedly abusing the new site, don't think I'll let you get away with it.
