I offered over MSN to join the beta team for the third time, in the past you've only had crews of yes-men; I'm not asking for a beta release that's half done. Hell, your own team members are mad that you're even showing half-done content that they produced without their consent, but that's another story.

What makes you think you are different than anyone else that has offered to beta test for us? Are we supposed to be graced by your offer?
