
Subject: Re: Renguard/Norton Problems

Posted by ingram091 on Mon, 24 Oct 2005 10:52:08 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

ok in an effort to smooth things over between clans... mostly under pressure from the clan to comply... I will make 1 civil post on this issue and then consider it dropped.

My problem is not with your using the tool, its not taking action to eliminate the need for a tool that is being used by numerous worms and viruses out there to launch their attacks. AND telling people to just allow it to work ignoring the virus warning. New viruses are NOT caught in time by anti-virus companies all the time. So by white listing a blocked tool you put yourself at a higher risk then is recommended. Just to use your program. In my particular case I can not use it anyway, because I use windows 2000, but that's another issue.

According to a message I received from AntiCracking@AntiCracking.sk the golden support customer base are able to receive an updated method for embedding their protection into their compiled executable. all you have to do is request a support ticket on the matter.

This is a computer safety issue, not a renguard issue.

according to symantec here <http://securityresponse.symantec.com/avcenter/venc/data/w32.spybot.ubh.html> the file "Creates the file %System%\SVKP.sys. This is used by the worm to unpack itself and execute" this is one of many worms currently using this method. Thats is why all of them are now adding it to their list of blocked signatures.

Thus it is a vulnerability that should not be used if at all possible. the developers are aware of its current abuse and are taking stems to secure the method through other means. but at this time its a vulnerability, most. including myself, are not willing to risk using just for a 3rd party anti-cheating program.

A similar problem is also hitting punkbuster, so there is no need to feel singled out. This is what they do. In any case. This is my last posting to your forums. I have no desire to continue the flame war between clans forums. I will instruct our members that upon a single complaint of continued flaming we will suspend them from HT clan for some predetermined period. I too will be suspended for a short time as a council member over this issue. This is an effort to repair any misgivings between clans and to end the PMs and flame posting...

thank you,

=HT=Ingram
HazTeam Council.
