Oh dear, I opened a can of worms.

My policy is if you can't watch your rear, thats where I will attack from. Sneaking around players un-noticed then sucessfully attacking them requires practice, and I much prefer it to mashing A and D and shooting wildly down a corridor.

Just a little bit of info, "looping" only because a Renegade term this year, before then people knew you had to watch your ass on the battlefield.

Besides, on islands you can see the opposite corridor, so it's easy to tell when someone is going to make it around. It's always smart to sneak up on your enemy, no matter what kind of server your in.
