Alot of people don't respect these kinds of inventions because they do not realise the amount of technology involved in the project. And as one of you said, think of all the things we have now just because the inventors did not give up. Saying things like he needs a hobby...pfff/ You must not be able to see that he obviously has one...creating colored bubbles. Personally, that invention has to be the most amazing thing I have seen in a great long while. I respect the fact that he did not give up on his "dream" par say.

I give him a big thumbs up, and besides, think of all the lil' kiddies he made happy.

Colored bubbles, simply amazing.
