

---

Subject: Re: The 5 Phases of RenGuard users
Posted by Aircraftkiller on Sat, 31 Dec 2005 03:20:33 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Quote:#1. light posted this to be humorous not for it to spread into some mind boggling debate about whether or not people should run RG.

Light's "joke" was not funny in the least. The intent of his post is irrelevant, a forum tends to be a dynamic place of discussion and a topic rarely stays on its intended course of discussion.

Quote:#4. I don't understand why players such as ourselves should download Renguard, we are experienced and have talent in the game, most people know that already and leave us to have our fun; often times carrying on a joyful conversation while doing so.

It's easy to understand: You should download RenGuard because you're expected to do so by the majority of server owners. I'm probably way more experienced than you are, having played this game since the first day of the beta test back on 3 December of 2001; I'm expected to run RenGuard like any other user and I do so without issue or complaint.

Quote:#5. Is this debate about running Renguard or who the !forcerg command should be able to be accessed by? Last I checked all servers on Renegade had their own rules and own policy on how to run things, correct me if I'm wrong please?

Which answers your above statement about why you don't understand RenGuard being a necessity on servers.

Quote:Last but not least #6. Explain this infamous logic everyone is talking about as to why people should use RG. Renguard contains flaws in it like any other program that could be made, running it or not running it tests will occur throughout the rest of the time that Renegade stays alive.

Of course it contains flaws in it, but I'll reiterate a point from Crimson since she's not here at the moment: Where's your proof that any of these supposed flaws actually exist? For the sake of argument, let's assume that RenGuard has some sort of flaw that allows a few people to run a cheating package somehow - even if they did, why does that mean that nobody should use RenGuard?

Go on with your gaming and refuse to run it, just don't whine like an idiot when you get banned by the users for not wanting to deal with non-RenGuard users. 99% of the time any RG user is not cheating, and I'm still waiting on proof that anyone's cheated with it before.

---