

---

Subject: Re: The 5 Phases of RenGuard users
Posted by warranto on Sat, 31 Dec 2005 16:49:30 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

light wrote on Sat, 31 December 2005 03:42 But how does that effect me? With or without RG i'm still clean as a whistle, and i'd hope to be tested even if I was running it.

RG does have its uses, it stops the cheats that don't know how to attempt a decent bypass (or where to find one), the first-timers and the n00b bighead users, and for that i'm appreciative, but when servers swear by it and require no other forms of determining if they're cheat-free, then you end up without a filter in your fridge.

Thats the argument i'm trying to put forward, not that RG is totally useless, but that it can't prove a person totally innocent.

But that's just it, it has nothing to do with you. A lock on your house protects the house, a firewall protects your computer. None of those do anything to protect you, except by consequence of protecting the object where you reside. RenGuard protects the server, where you are currently residing. Perhaps a better parallel would be to think of it as the security gate before getting on a flight. Sure the average person will not try to do anything that would require them to be stopped, but you are still required to go through the security -like everyone else. I've never seen anyone complain that they had to suffer the indignity of a security check, because they hold high principles and would never do anything.

---