Heh. Sorry about the gender mistake. My mind habitually assumes all people who play online games with some violence are male.

So far I've played roughly 3-5 hours online and it is quite fun. Reminds me of www.wulfram.com which I used to play. They share the same concept: Destroy the enemy buildings to hinder the enemy or to stop the enemy from spawning.

I use the Westwood option to whom it may concern.

My biggest problem at first was handling money. I thought everyone shared their money together. I wouldn't spend hardly any of the money. Then after a while I noticed that my money would only drop when certain buildings blew up or if I spent it.

Then there was the problem with mines and C4, but I quickly learned about them through trial and error. Kaboom.

I'll stop rambling now. My in game name is ChristBro. So far I have been playing in the games at the top of the list in the default order. In fact, I'm planning to play right now. So if your on and you want to, send me a hello or something.
