
Subject: Re: Are We All Racist, To Some Degree?
Posted by -MP-puddle on Mon, 06 Mar 2006 11:55:00 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

This was a subject on my management course that required an answer.

As a group, the answer was simple, Racism stems from the beliefs of your Mother and Father.

As a child, we would not be aware of what was meant, when we heard some comments being made from our Parents. However, once the comments stuck in our mind, we as individuals would grow up believing that what our Parents said must be true, without questioning it.

Let us look at different example.

I have family living in Ireland(UK) Not one of them has had any direct links with any of the "Troubles" but when I speak to them the reply is "My parents, parents..... Had problems". (bigotry)

We must look at ourselves and make a decision based on our own morales and beliefs if Racism is ever to wiped out.

My own thoughts? "Never in a million years will it be eradicated".
