You just need to install a GUI or keyboard applet or key-map program. Whatever you want to call it.
It will be under input devices at majorgeeks.com
I personally use one from HP 's web site, but I installed about 15 of them before I found one I like.
I guess what I am using is an applet because it adds the "button" tab into my keyboard properties.
Then I can change the address to whatever as you can see the photo key is actually a web address. The pictures next to the keys are propaganda I tell you.
