I actually find this a bit funny, and some of the quotes are hilarious: "This is the violent video game world--a world that, as far as I am concerned, is straight from the pits of hell."

Anyway, I believe that the media in general is the reason there are so many kids who kill, steal and other things and now, games are adding to this, but still the biggest violent influence is the TV because the violence seen on TV looks much more realistic than in video games.

But there is one problem and major difference between TV and video games: games can be regulated, but TV can't really be regulated, unless the Hollywood starts to censor EVERY movie, or TV show that shows violence(which will never happen by the way).
